Working with lenders can be one of the most difficult parts of the home purchase transaction. Buyers don't feel they're in charge. Harassment might better characterize the loan approval process. Mandatory forms are ambiguous. Lenders ask for an ever-increasing amount of documentation. If you don't provide it in a timely fashion, your loan may be denied.

You choose the lender or mortgage broker you want to work with. You are the decision-maker when it comes to what kind of mortgage you want: fixed rate, adjustable-rate (ARM) or a fixed/ARM hybrid.

Your loan professional should provide you with all the information you need to compare the various mortgage options available, but you decide which one is best for you. You also decide how much to borrow, even if it is less than what you can qualify to borrow.

This list is provided for your own evaluation of mortgage services. All are experienced loan originators. Most will provide you in/out of state 800 numbers, as well as pager numbers.
